July 2020. The federal government is providing pass-through funding that covers the majority of the cost of the reinsurance program (because reinsurance keeps premiums lower than they would otherwise have been, premium subsidies are also smaller, resulting in savings for the federal government; pass-through funding refers to the process of using a 1332 waiver to allow the state to use the savings).

Pennsylvania estimated that the transition to a state-based exchange and the implementation of a reinsurance program would result in individual market premiums about 5 to 10% lower in 2021 than they would otherwise have been. Insurers that offer health plan options in Pennsylvania's marketplace ultimately reduced their average premiums by 3.3% (versus an overall average rate increase that would have been necessary without the reinsurance program).
